

PHOENIX NewTimes

Best Of Award

September 30th, 2010

Best Old Arizona Charm - 2010

Comments (1)

The Stockyards Restaurant

It's hard to imagine that the area near this stretch of East Phoenix used to be the country's biggest cattle feedlot, but a visit to The Stockyards – situated in what was once the Tovrea Land and Cattle Company's administrative offices – can take you back in time to an era when ranching was still a big part of the local culture, and the city's movers and shakers did business over hefty steaks and stiff cocktails. Meat and potatoes is still the name of the game here, with exotica like elk and demurely named "calf fries" supplementing steaks, burgers, salads, and seafood dishes. Settle into a big booth, ogle the cowboy-themed paintings and branding iron chandelier, and enjoy a reminder of when the West was still Western.

The Stockyards Restaurant
5009 E. Washington St.
Phoenix, AZ
602-273-7378

Visit Website

Map & Details>>

